William Hayden was first placed in the dock. The prisoner was indicted on the 18th of October, and his trial fixed for the 31st by his own counsel; but on that day his trial was postponed till to-day.

The jury panel having been called, his counsel instructed the prisoner that he has a right to challenge any of the names he may hear called on the jury about to try him.

Mr. Campbell, Clork of the Court, having explained this to the prisoner, said, "My Lord, he does not intend to challenge any, a jury having been sworn."

Mr. R. A. Harrison, in a short address, opened the case for the Crown, and, having explained the different counts of the indictment, said he would not delay the jury, but proceed to call the Crown witnesses, from whose evidence it would be for them to judge with what intent the prisoner came into the country.

Mr. McKencie then raised several objections to the indictment, much the same as those raised in Barry's, and, with the exception of the last, which was, that the statute under which the prisoner was tried, was passed subsequent to the committal of the act with which the prisoner was charged.

John Hughes was then examined for the defense, as follows:

WASHINGTON.

THE ELECTION EXCITEMENT—FERLINGS OF THE PRES-FURTHER EXAMINATION OF PRISONERS-ONE OF THE IDENT-PRESSURE FOR THE REMOVAL OF COM-MISSIONER ROLLINS-PERSONAL.

BY THESGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Nov. 7, 1865. The President takes the result of yesterday's elsetion very quietly, although he has been very much disappointed at some of the developments. It is understood that he had been assured so positively of certainty of success in New-York by Thurlow Weed and others, if the course in relation to appointments marked out by them was followed, that he firmly believed that State at least would indorse his policy. The defeat of John Hogan in Missouri also considerably surprises him, as he regarded his reëlection as unquestionable. His intimate personal and political relations with Mr. Hogan make his defeat particularly unpalatable. There is, however, no reason to suppose that the emphatic condemnation of his policy by the loyal States will induce him to change his course in regard to reconstruction. He holds that as regards the Constitutional Amendment he has nothas regards the Constitutional Amendment as has not ing to do with its adoption or rejection, and will not in any way urge it either publicly or privately upon any State. The Conservatives here are deriving as much comfort as possible out of the result in New-York city and Maryland. They try to offset the latter, particularly against their overwhelming de-feats everywhere else, and regard the practical restoration of Maryland to Rebel rule as glory enough for one day.

The Capital was never duller than it is at pre-There are very few strangers here just now, and the hotels are almost deserted. Considerable interest has been manifested throughout the day to obtain later election returns, and their tayorable characteristics. Republicans appears to afford general satisfaction. Hoffman's majority in New-York City and Brooklyn excites much surprise to those who fall to realize the strength of the rum interest. On the whole, the Republicans here are rejoiced and the Democrats resigned o the result.

There continues to be great pressure upon the Pres ident and Secretary McCullech to obtain the removal of Commissioner Rollins of the Internal Revenue Bureau. New applicants for the position are constantly turning up, the latest being Geo. Cumminger, the defeated competitor of Mr. Ashley in the Toledo, Ohio, district. It is understood that Geo. Steedman is to be here in a day or two to advocate his appointment. be here in a day of two to advocate his appointment. There don't seem to be much encouragement in the prospect for these patriots. Should a change be made, Mr. Spooner of Cincinnati would undoubtedly receive the appointment, but there it little reason to suppose that a change is imminent in this important and responsible position, which is now so ably filled by Mr. Pollies. Mr. Rollins.

A committee from Cincinnati waited on the President to-day and urged the appointment of one of their number as postmaster of the city. The place has already been filled, and their mission is unsuccessful.

MASSACHUSETTS. LECTURE OF THE HON, GRO. 8. BOUTWELD ON "JUSTICE

Boaros, Nov. 7.—The Hop. Geo. 8. Boutwell, M. C. has lectured to might on "Justice and Policy in Public Affairs." By policy he did not mean that course of action Affairs. By policy he did not mean that course of action which flows from the operations or workings of justice itself but that course of counted and its consequences which have their origin in the purposes of men regardless of principles of right. It is impossible for Nations to depart from the punciples of right without at the same time suffering the consequences of such departure in the loss of unit, stability and national strength. Examples were given from the instead of the followed by eational weakness and loss. The injustice of England to ward Ireland had deprived the British Empire of the services of 4,000,000 of her citizens who have emigrated to this country. The speaker then briefly sketched fits political history of the country from the adoption of the Constitution, showing that the national policy Constitution, showing that the national policy had always been to acknowledge, perpetuate and extend slavery, and claiming that the foundations of the Government having been laid in injustice the causes of the late rebellious outbreak were set in motion from its very beginning; justice in the fundamental principles of very beginning; justice in the fundamental principles of of the Government is necessary, and the speaker, for the security of individual rights, a class of people who are deprived of a share in the government will always be oppressed. Experience demonstrates that the whole people are wiser and stronger than any part of them and just in proportion as you exclude any part of the people from the Government you weaken its power. No country can be united except upon the basis of justica to all its citizens, any degree of injustice will be a source of continued agitation and opposition to the fundamental principles of the Government. The Government having been founded on injustice, there has been for the last 39 years no substantial, but only a Union in name. The work to be done now is to reconstruct the Government years no substantial, but only a Union in name. The work to be done now is to reconstruct the Government in such a manner and on such principles that it shall hereafter tend to permanence and unity, rather than toward dissolution and disuntegration, as it has for the past half century. Every lover of his country must ardently desire to see this result effected as speedily as possible, so that there may no longer exist the anomaly of the taxastion of the Southern States without their representation in Congress. The speaker then proceeded to discuss the amendments now proposed to the Constitution and specially referring to the amendment for ceeded to discuss the amendments now proposed to the Constitution, and specially referring to the amendment for equalizing representation. He was, however, unwilling to accept these amendments as a final sattlement, and urged the extension of the elective franchise to the loyal readmen as a measure of justice, of sound policy, and of necessity, in order to secure the future tranquility of the South and the whole courter. and the whole country.

He did not ask it as charity, but he claimed it as a right.

From The Augusta (Ga.) Constitutionalist. From The Augusta (Ga.) Constitutionalist.

The Round Table is in many respects the ablast 'weekly' which has ever appeared in America. Politically its tone is moderate and conservative. From the beginning it has advocated reconstruction upon the broadest basis of equity and justice. * Its mercule is peculiarly elevated. Against social evils of every kind it wages the most determined war. * Its literary criticisms are impartially catholic, and often brilliant. The intrinsic merit of a beak, not the author's previous reputation, is the one-thing kept steadily in riow."
